

with Lissandier but broke the tail off just as he lifted off the rail. Saturday he made two flights - one twenty-eight minutes long with Lissandier.

Comte de Lambert and his wife came Saturday evening. Captain Girardville came this morning. Pleriot and his wife are here until tonight. Balfour is coming Wednesday. Things are beginning to be interesting.

We lunched yesterday with Lord Northcliffe. He is staying at our hotel but has private apartments. We had a nice time. He is good company.

Saturday I went with some Irish people, who are staying at our hotel, to Eaux Bonnes and Eaux Chaudes - little places up in the Pyrenees. The first means Good Waters, the second means Hot Waters. The road to Eaux Chaudes is through a mountain gorge and was the loveliest road I ever saw. We had our lunch on a little table before a roaring fire. It was very cold up in the snow.

Dear Daddy -

I never saw anything so hard to do as to write letters. We have no comfortable place for such things.

The sun is very hot and I think I was in it too much yesterday. The result is that I have a miserable headache today. It is a queer thing about the sun here. It is very dangerous, they say.

Bill began flying Wednesday. He made two short flights by himself that day. The engine was not working satisfactorily. Thursday he took Mr. Lissandier for two trips. Friday, he started
